Partnering with Patients to Prevent Diabetes

Learn how Shared Decision Making (SDM) can increase awareness and help patients select and follow through with informed options for diabetes prevention treatment that are aligned to their values and goals. Shared decision making (SDM) has been defined as: “an approach where clinicians and patients share the best available evidence when faced with the task of making decisions, and where patients are supported to consider options, to achieve informed preferences”.

During the Fireside Chat moderated by Neha Sachdev, MD, Director, Health Systems Relationships, AMA with Tannaz Moin MD, Associate Professor of Medicine at the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA and Kenrik Duru MD, Professor of Medicine at UCLA, they discussed how to operationalize a physician-led team-based care approach incorporating clinical pharmacists. They also shared their experience in implementing a shared decision-making approach for diabetes prevention within a large, regional health system.
